

View From My Window by Pastor Everhart

It's time to review the lessons I've learned from spending a week with a ten month old: 1) What you think is childproof isn't, just because you can't get past a barrier doesn't mean they can't, 2) What is funny the first time they do something can become very frustrating the 101st time they do it, 3) Never place a plate of food in front of the child, feed one piece at a time otherwise plan on picking up scattered food morsels (this is the one place where dogs come in handy), 4) You have to choose between thirsty dogs and a wet toddler, 5) The child can nap as you take them for a walk but you can't, 6) They are afraid of the wrong things, 7) The difference between picking them up when they want to be picked up and picking them up when they do not is a trip to the chiropractor.
