THE VIEW FROM MY WINDOW

One of the greatest days in any parent's life is the day their child is potty trained, but I have yet to meet a parent that remembers that date for very long. That's true of so many significant dates in the development of your child: 1st tooth, 1st word, 1st step ... we meet each of these new accomplishments with great joy – so why don't they stick in our memory? I think it's because as soon as they pass one goal they're pushing toward another. We get so caught up in their struggle forward that the past quickly fades.

What is next is always better than what just happened. That's not just true about kids. Somewhere in life we start believing the devil's lie that our clay has hardened, that we are who we are & we can't change. Liar, liar, pants on fire! Each one of us is constantly changing even if we don't take notice of it. Don't settle for what you've been. "With God's help I can do it!"
